

36th Annual Melanoma and Cutaneous Oncology Symposium

Presented by Scripps Cancer Center

January 24–25, 2026 · Hyatt Regency Mission Bay · San Diego, California

Course Overview

The field of cutaneous oncology continues to evolve at a rapid pace, with groundbreaking advancements reshaping prognosis, molecular diagnostics, treatment strategies, and patient follow-up. The Melanoma and Cutaneous Oncology Symposium is thoughtfully designed to deliver practical, focused, and up-to-date educational insights aimed at enhancing the care and outcomes of individuals with skin cancers. Through dynamic interactive lectures and real-world patient case discussions, nationally renowned experts will share the latest evidence on prevention, risk stratification, early detection, genetic influences, current therapeutic approaches, and emerging treatments.

This symposium will comprehensively address a wide range of topics, including challenges in surgical management, the role of adjuvant therapies, innovative treatments for advanced disease, and personalized strategies to optimize patient care. By participating, clinicians will gain the knowledge and tools necessary to confidently navigate complex patient scenarios, make informed clinical decisions, and ultimately improve outcomes while preserving patients' quality of life.
